Proposal for Final

Web Production I-2025FALL-AM

I am planning to create a website that will be about watches, their history a little bit, and how they work. It will have three pages with clear navigation so users can easily move around the site.

The first page will be a landing page that shows a general breakdown of what the website will feature.

On the second page, I will use a JavaScript slider like I did in my Russian doll project, and I will feature an arm and a few watches to "try on." My design will be simple. I will choose at least three hex colors, such as dark blue, gold, and gray, because they match the look of many classic watches. Ideally I want to try and make each page match up.

The final page will feature a history of watches similar to my page in the midterm titled "Legends of Manchester United." I will include some photos and a description.

 I will try and find some Google fonts that match the aesthetic of watches and make time hands. So far a few fonts that I found that are interesting to me are; Source Serif 4, Designed by Frank Grießhammer, Metamorphous, Designed by James Grieshaber, and finally, Maiden Orange, Designed by Astigmatic. These fonts feature sleek yet interesting patterns that I think would resonate well with my overall page design.

To organize the layout, I will use flexbox and CSS grid so the pages look neat and balanced.

For my P5 animation, I will try and attempt to make a small clock that actually moves. I will also try to incorporate a CSS animation along with that, ideally something similar to my midterm with fading colors.
